Leaders of Scouting's National Honor Society Recognized at National Meeting

by Carey Mignerey

Ed Pease, who retired this spring after seven years as chairman of the Order of the Arrow, was honored for his service to the Order with a dinner on May 23 at the Opryland Convention Center in Nashville, Tennessee. As chairman, Pease administered dynamic growth and change in the Order.

More than 70 people attended the dinner, including several national committee members and their spouses, distinguished volunteers and friends of Pease. Moreover, 15 national officers who served with Pease honored him at the event. The director and seven national chiefs recounted memories and paid tribute to the past chairman.

On the following day, the BSA National Annual Meeting began. Several thousand Scouters and professionals convened, representing Scouting across the nation. At the national OA committee meeting, Pease introduced Brad Haddock as the new OA chairman.

Several other national OA committee members also were recognized at the meeting. Jack Hess, Western Region OA chairman, was honored with the

ORDER OF THE ARROW SPEAKING

National Chief Carey Mignerey and National Vice Chief Jordan Hitchens preside over the opening show at the National Order of the Arrow Conference in Knoxville, Tennessee.

The conference also was a success because each of you gained irreplaceable memories--leadership training, dance competitions, region gatherings, the theme show, patch trading. Very Important Arrowmen meals. NOAC was uniquely memorable to everyone. At the same time, we all shared the experience. As we heard in the opening show, "We come together to explore that which makes us unique and to reaffirm that which binds us together."

For both of us, NOAC 2000 was unforgettable not only because of the opportunities that a conference presents, but also for the time shared with old and new friends. We hope that the conference has been unforgettable for you, as well. Until we meet again, may we be "Bound in Brotherhood, Led by the Spirit."

Siwinis Lodge, Los Angeles Area Council, sent 12 youth to NOAC for $50.00 each! This included airfare, van rental, gas, contingent patches, and bowling and pizza for all on the way home. Fund-raising activities began in early 1999 and included two trade-o-rees, a pancake breakfast, a spaghetti dinner, a food concession at the council scout-o-rama, and of course a special NOAC flap fund raiser.

Section NE-5B, of upstate New York, held its final conclave. The area is dissolving and the section is merging. The conclave was highlighted with the spirited participation by national officers Carey Mignerey, Jordan Hitchens, and Scott Schmidt. The highlight of the program was the Hawaiian luau held on Saturday night, which included a pig roast, food galore, and leis that were given to everyone!

Speak Up, We're Listening

by Alex Rhodes

Have you ever been asked to share a few words with a group of Arrowmen? Teach a training session? Run for lodge or section office?

If so, read on: This article could make you a more effective speaker. In the OA, Arrowmen are often speaking to a group. Everyone has the ability to become a strong orator, but it takes practice.

The topic and the presentation are the two main areas of focus when preparing a speech. Selecting a topic should be easy. Being a good speaker starts with your confidence and knowledge of a subject. It is complemented by your enthusiasm, which strengthens your rapport with the audience.

Focus your message on one central theme with key, supporting points. Try not to use trendy quotes, and do not begin by quoting the dictionary. Instead, personalize your message by telling specific stories about events or people your audience members will recognize. This will keep their attention focused on your topic and build your credibility.

While the topic of your speech is the foundation, nothing is more important than presentation. Presentation is how you transform thoughts and words into emotions and actions. Observe the following points:

- Practice, practice, practice. Know your speech so well that it becomes a talk with a small group of people, no matter how big the audience. This lets you add your own style and make your point.
- Set an example. Wear a full Scout uniform. There may be someone in the audience who looks up to you.

- Acknowledge your audience. Thank the audience for letting you share your thoughts.
- Speak slowly and clearly. Articulate your words, use inflection in your voice to make points, project your voice to the far corner of the room, and pause between sentences and key points to give your audience time to understand your message.
- Move away from the lectern while speaking. Move closer to your audience to make eye contact with individuals.
- Share something. Open up to your audience members by sharing personal thoughts and feelings. Your goal is not to talk at them, but to share your message with them.
- Ask questions. Pose questions to audience members that require thought but not a direct verbal answer. This keeps their attention focused on the topic and helps them to reflect on your message.
- Give your audience "to-dos." Part inspiration, part motivation, part unanswered question, the environment you create should encourage audience members to answer the call to action.
- Give your audience an ending to remember. Simplify your theme into a short phrase that the audience will remember that is clear, concise and direct. Leave the audience with a question that demands a response. Soon it may be your turn to speak. Are you ready?

Unami Lodge Restores Ties to the Past

by Mark Chilutti

To commemorate the OA's 85th anniversary, the brothers of Unami Lodge have committed to restoring the original lodge house on Treasure Island.

Built in 1919 and in use since then, the house needed major repairs, including a new roof, refrigerator, fireplace inserts, staircases, light fixtures and bathroom and ramps for accessibility by people with disabilities. The council executive board brought the renovation proposal to the executive committee of the lodge, which quickly agreed to the project.

Plans called for about $40,000 to cover expenses. To raise the money, the lodge petitioned the national OA committee and received a $5,000 matching service grant. At the lodge banquet, Cradle of Liberty Council Scout Executive Bill Dwyer announced that the council would match the grant, and the project was up and running.

Project adviser and past Unami Lodge chief Mark Chilutti drew up a four-phase proposal to reach the fund-raising goal. The first phase involved an individual outreach in which more than 50 Arrowmen were asked to contribute at least $100 each. More than $7,000 has been raised this way. The second phase was the sale of 300 special council strip sets to commemorate the project.

The third phase is the sale of a special, 16-color jacket patch showing E. Urner Goodman beside the lodge house. The lodge hopes to sell a total of 150 patches. The fourth phase is the "Walkway at Unami Lodge." Individuals and troops will be able to purchase a special brick and leave a message on a walkway that will be built around the lodge house.

With the fund-raising beyond the halfway mark, the project is on target for completion after the 2000 summer camp season. Much of the work was done before the lodge's 85th anniversary celebration in May. A special rededication ceremony will take place in November when the project is completed.

The brothers of Unami Lodge want to express their appreciation to the national OA committee, the Cradle of Liberty Council for their financial support, and the Arrowmen from across the country who have purchased patches to support this project.

Profiles in Service

by Michael Long

Members of the Tsoiotsi Tsogalii Lodge, chartered by the Old North State Council, Greensboro, North Carolina, rendered many hours of cheerful service at their council camporee. More than 175 members served:

- As troop guides, helping with check-in and registration
- As part of the chaos crew, moving equipment, delivering meals to exhibitors, and helping wherever needed
- Producing three issues of the camporee newsletter
- Offering midway support, assisting exhibitors with setting up and running their booths
- Serving as building security and show ushers
- Operating the Indian village, including a trading post

The Indian village was the hit of the camporee. It featured bear claw necklace-making, flint-knapping, native archery, drumming and dancing and a cooking station. It also featured two teepees, which were popular with all the Scouts. One Webelos Scout was quoted in the local paper saying the Indian village was his favorite part of the camporee.

More than 4,000 Boy Scouts, Cub Scouts, Tiger Cubs, Webelos Scouts and adult leaders attended. 🐾

Operation First Class

Operation First Class is a national program that benefits less fortunate Scouts in the community. For the past three years, Aal-Pa-Tah Lodge, in conjunction with the Gulfstream Council, has organized and staffed this annual event with financial support from AT&T Wireless Services. This program offers the urban Scouts of south Florida an opportunity to learn what it is like to camp in the great outdoors and starts them out on the Scouting trail.

Throughout the weekend, OA members conduct round-robin classes that teach the basic Scouting skills required for Tenderfoot, Second Class and First Class ranks. Numerous fun-filled activities are held for the young Scouts to make their introduction to Scouting exciting and memorable. Activities include drift boat fishing, indoor climbing, scuba diving instructions, laser tag, hot-air balloon demonstrations and wildlife presentations.

This is the fourth year that the Aal-Pa-Tah Lodge will host this event. It has gained popularity throughout the council and section. The organizers hope to see more national interest following a story about this event in the September issue of Scouting magazine. If anyone would like more information on Operation First Class or has any new ideas for this event, please feel free to contact the following lodge leaders via e-mail.

Burning Issues with Steve Arisman

Question: What is the Founder's Award? What are the requirements for selection?

Answer: The Guide for Officers and Advisers states: "The Founder's Award was created to honor and recognize those Arrowmen who have given outstanding service to the lodge." The award is reserved for those Arrowmen who memorialize the spirit of achievement as described by founder E. Urner Goodman.

There are no set national procedures or requirements for choosing recipients.

The only stipulation is that if any awards are given, at least one recipient must be a youth member. Depending on its membership, a lodge may honor up to four Arrowmen with this award each year.

A national video, soon to be released, will provide additional information about the award.
